CMYK v RGB
https://www.designandprint.studio/?p=cmyk-vs-rgb Screens make colour with light. Printers make it with ink. That is why a bright colour on your monitor can look calmer on paper, and why we always prepare print artwork in CMYK.

Bleed and safe area
https://www.designandprint.studio/?p=bleed-and-safe-area
Printers cannot cut perfectly on the edge of your artwork, so every file needs a little extra. We ask for 3mm bleed and a 5mm safe area .

PNG v JPEG
https://www.designandprint.studio/?p=png-vs-jpeg
JPEG makes photographs small, but each save throws a little more detail away. PNG keeps everything and supports transparency. Choosing the right one protects your quality.

Go big with print
https://www.designandprint.studio/?p=go-big-with-print
Large format print is anything too big for an ordinary office printer, from a poster the size of a door to a banner that spans a shopfront. It gets noticed from across the street, and it is easier to order than you might think.

Canva resizing guide
https://www.designandprint.studio/?p=canva-resizing-guide Resizing a design is quick once you know where to look. This guide covers Canva Pro and the free version, then shows how to export a file that is ready to print.

Envelopes: for the perfect fit https://www.designandprint.studio/?p=envelopes-perfect-fit
The right envelope protects what is inside and makes a good first impression. Match the envelope to your print size, then pick a paper and colour that suit your brand.

Design and printing wedding signs https://www.designandprint.studio/?p=wedding-signs
From the welcome sign to the table numbers, wedding signs guide your guests and set the tone for the day. This guide covers sizes, materials and how to keep it all looking consistent.

The importance of branding for a new business https://www.designandprint.studio/?p=new-business-branding
A new business has no reviews and no reputation yet. Good branding builds trust from day one and makes every flyer, sign and card easier to create.

Printing tips for graphic designers https://www.designandprint.studio/?p=printing-tips-for-designers Good files prevent errors, delays and costly reprints. These seven tips cover the checks designers most often get caught out by.

Creating perfect print-ready artwork
https://www.designandprint.studio/?p=print-ready-artwork Print-ready artwork is a file that can go straight to press with no changes. Get these few things right and your job runs smoothly, on time and looking as you intended.
